

BIRD-SHOT

(Story)

Setting: Middle of the desert, far from a town.

ACT I:

(Introduction to the game and our protagonist, Marlon Redwood)

(Text at the beginning of the game)

You are Marlon Redwood. You've been through it all. Robberies, gun for hire, duels, arson and more. This story isn't about any of those events. You left everything behind and are now alone. The only thing giving you meaning in life... is hunting. Shoot down as many birds as you can.

(Cut to a shot of Marlon's holding his revolver)

Marlon: Betsy... you're all I have left. Bless me with your strength.

(Shot of Marlon aiming down his revolver "Betsy")

Marlon: Aim (Mouse Movement)... fire (Left click)... cock the hammer (Right click)... and if I am out, put as many bullets as I can into the cylinder (Press R repeatedly)...

(Transition into shooting stage)

ACT II:

(Introduction to the character (Winnie C. Lester) and his gimmick)

(Shot of Marlon holstering his Betsy)

Marlon: That's enough for today, it's getting dark.

Winnie: HEY!!!

Marlon: Is someone there?

Winnie: HEY CRACKSHOT!!!

(Marlon quickdraws his revolver and points behind him.)

Marlon: Who's there? What do you want with me, huh?

Winnie: That's some pretty fancy shooting for an elder, huh?

(Marlon has a surprised look on his face)

Marlon: What the... what are you?

(Shot revealing Winnie the Gunhead)

Winnie: What am I? What am I?? I am a gunhead, have you never seen one before, old timer?

Marlon: Am I- am I having one of those dreams again?

Winnie: I am as real as real can be, baby!

Marlon: ...

(Marlon looks down, he looks shocked.)

Marlon: I think I need a drink.

Winnie: Hey! Don't be like that... tell you what, if I show you what this gun for a head can do. How bout you stay, partner?

Marlon: ...

(Marlon shrugs his shoulders)

Marlon: I got nothing better to do, why not?

Winnie: Sit down buster and let Winnie C. Lester the Gunhead, show you how it's really done!

(Transition to shooting stage)

ACT III:

(Duel between Marlon and Winnie, amount of birds shot by both characters effects the ending and how this act plays out.)

(If Winnie did good.)

(Shot of Marlon sitting, he looks impressed)

Marlon: That was some fancy shooting. You're pretty good, Winnie.

(Zoom out, both Marlon and Winnie are on screen. Winnie is smiling.)

Winnie: What do you think this ego was for nothing?

Marlon: You remind me of someone I used to be with a very long time ago...

Winnie: Probably had terrible aim, if he isn't here now.

(Marlon looks down, he's having flashbacks to an old friend)

Marlon: ...

(Marlon looks back up, he looks as if an idea just popped in his head.)

Marlon: Tell you what? How bout you and I have a little duel?

Winnie: We just met... and you already want to put me 6 feet under? I am flattered.

Marlon: No... I left the life of dueling a long time ago. I am talking about a little game.

Winnie: Do say, old timer.

(Marlon puts his hand up pointing at Winnie)

Marlon: Five rounds, no turns, we shoot down as many poor birds out of the night sky as we can.

Winnie: You got yourself a game pal.

(Transition to shooting stage)

(If Winnie did bad.)

(Shot of Marlon sitting down, he's holding in a laugh)

Marlon: Wow.

Marlon: You're pretty bad, partner.

(Zoom out shot, Winnie is pissed off. He's stomping his foot like a child.)

Winnie: S-Shut up! It's not my day, today.

(Marlon is smiling)

Marlon: Whatever you say, I can shoot down more birds with my Betsy blindfolded.

Winnie: ...

(Winnie stops his stomping, he looks like an idea just struck in hard in the head)

Winnie: You know what? How about this. A little game I've thought between the both of us to prove who's the better sharpshooter.

(Marlon has a stern look on his face)

Marlon: If you're thinking of a duel, forget it.

(Winnie has a shit eating grin on his face. He points up)

Winnie: Oh no no no. Here's the rules, 5 rounds, no turns, we both shoot down as much birds as we can. Whoever shoots down more wins! Do you understand that or even hear that, old timer?

(Marlon looks down and sighs.)

Marlon: Whatever you say, whiny. I got nothing better to do with my life anyway.

(Transition to shooting stage)

(If Marlon Wins)

(Close up shot of Marlon smiling)

Marlon: Still got it.

Winnie: ...

(Shot of Marlon looking at Winnie. Winnie is sitting down)

Marlon: Cat got your tongue?

Winnie: You beat me fair and square.

Marlon: Color me surprised.

Marlon: I thought you'd have a temper tantrum over this.

Winnie: No point.

Marlon: You really do remind me of someone I used to know.

(Winnie looks curious)

Winnie: Spill the beans.

Marlon: How bout we talk about it over a couple of shots? Drink's on me.

Winnie: You got yourself a deal.

(Cue credits)

(If Winnie wins)

(Shot of Winnie pointing at himself, Marlon is staring at his revolver)

Winnie: And the young overtake the elderly.

Marlon: Betsy... I failed you. Forgive me.

(Shot of Winnie looking back at Marlon)

Winnie: Feel that hot air? That's the air of failure, old timer. What are you going to do?

Marlon: Drink to the point where I'll forget this ever happened.

Winnie: Hey, maybe I'll pay your tab out of sympathy? How about that?

(Marlon has his hand on his Betsy)

Marlon: Leave me alone, boomstick.

Winnie: Awww... you sure? People say I am alright when they know me!

(Marlon looks very pissed off)

Marlon: If you don't stop your antagonizing, I am gonna blow your shoulder clean off.

Winnie: Okay! Okay! Jeez... it's just playful banter!

Marlon: It's gonna get you buried six feet under. Now scram!

Winnie: No need to tell me twice, old timer!

(Cue credits)